

Marcia Thompson: ReMix Yourself 14

Here's your chance to play art museum curator! Inspired by the MIA's Art ReMix program, we invite you to create your own ReMixes between contemporary (after 1960) and historic (before 1960) works in the MIA's collection. Art ReMix* is an exciting exhibition project that juxtaposes contemporary artworks amid the MIA's permanent collection.

Here's how to ReMix Yourself!

We provide a new contemporary work of art each week, and you ReMix it with an historic one, explain your ReMix, and then share it with the world, comment and rate other people's ReMixes, and more! There will be a new ReMix Yourself every Monday through July 26, 2010, so check back often!

Here are 6 easy steps to ReMix Yourself:

Register and sign in to ArtsConnectEd. Duplicate this ReMix Yourself ArtCollector Set and rename it First Name Last Name: ReMix Yourself 14

Use ArtFinder to search the MIA's collection for something pre-1960 to ReMix Yourself with the post-1960 work we've supplied. Once you find your ReMix image, add it to your ReMix Yourself set. In the Display Annotation on the slide for the image you've added, explain your ReMix (why you chose the image you did). Submit your ReMix Yourself set for publication. I found this remix to be one of the most difficult. I am choosing a rather obvious piece as my remix choice.....another mandala from Tibet from the 13th century. The function of the mandala as visual aids to meditation is the central connection in my mind, although they also connect through place and form. My other choice was a photograph of blowing sand, connecting to the concept of impermanence in the sand mandala, but that was a 20th century image, so I will stick with this second mandala.
